HAZARD IDENTIFICATION Emergency Overview Immediate Concerns: Viscous liquid, crystalline solid or waxy solid with a very faint, slightly sweet odor. Slightly combustible. May support combustion at elevated temperatures. Thermal decomposition and burning may form toxic by-products. For large exposures or fire, wear personal protective equipment Highly toxic to fish and aquatic organisms. Keep out of drains and water courses. Moderately toxic if swallowed Potential Health Effects: Effects from overexposure result from either swallowing or coming into contact with the skin. Symptoms of overexposure include bleeding from the nose, tremors and convulsions. Contact with this product may occasionally produce skin sensations such as rashes, numbing, burning and tingling. These sensations are reversible and usually subside within 12 hours. Medical Conditions Aggravated: None presently known Primary Routes of Entry: Acute and chronic effects from overexposure may result from inhalation, ingestion, or absorption through the skin. Acute Effects from Overexposure: Data available on human exposure indicates that contact with bifenthrin may produce skin sensations (feelings of numbing, burning or tingling), which usually subside within 12 hours. Large doses ingested or inhaled by laboratory animals produced signs of toxicity which included clonic convulsions, tremors, loss of muscle control, neurotoxicity even though its principal mode of action is on the mammalian nervous system. Solvent-refined light paraffinic distillate, another ingredient, can cause temporary stinging pain when in contact with the eye. This formulation also contains mixed aromatic hydrocarbons, including xylene. Inhalation of aromatic hydrocarbon vapors may cause central nervous system depression, dizziness, disturbances in vision and respiratory irritation. Contact with eyes and skin may be resulting in pulmonary edema which is fatal. Chronic Effects from Overexposure: In studies with laboratory animals, bifenthrin did not cause reproductive toxicity or teratogenicity. The effect associated with repeated exposure of dogs, rats, rabbits and mice to bifenthrin was tremors. In lifetime A STRA INDUSTRIAL COMPLEX CO., LTD. (ASTRACHEM) P.O. BOX 30447, AL-KHOBAR 31952 KINGDOM OF SAUDI ARABIA www.astra-agri.com.sa MSDS: BIFLEX © TC 3 / 10 feeding studies conducted with rodents, a slight increase in the incidence of urinary bladder tumors at the highest dose in male mice was considered to be an equivocal response, not evidence of a clear compound-related effect. The overall results from a battery of genotoxicity studies indicate that bifenthrin is not considered to be genotoxic. Moderate irritation results from prolonged or repeated contact with solvent-refined paraffinic distillate to the skin. Overexposure to aromatic hydrocarbons in this formulation, including xylene, may cause central nervous system effects (including headaches, dizziness, loss of feelings and sensations) and liver and kidney damage. Some reversible hematopoietic depression has been reported in laboratory animals. Damage from xylene may be potentiated by alcohol. Medical Conditions Aggravated by Exposure: Pre-existing liver, kidney and nervous disorders. Carcinogenicity: IRAC: No, NTP: No, OSHA: No 4. FIRST AID MEASURES Eye: Flush eyes with for at least 15 minutes. Lift the upper and lower eyelids intermittently. See an ophthalmologist. Skin: Remove contaminated clothing and wash with soap and water. If irritation persists, see a physician. Ingestion: Do not induce vomiting or give anything by mouth to an unconscious person. Contact a medical doctor. Inhalation: Remove victim to fresh air. If not breathing administer artificial respiration. Avoid unprotected mouth to mouth resuscitation. GET MEDICAL ATTENTION. Note to Physician: Removal of exposure and symptomatic and supportive treatment is recommended. gastric lavage with an endotracheal tube in place should be considered as aromatic hydrocarbons in this formulation may produce a fatal pneumonitis if aspirated.
